

Do not alter the current rules regarding further concentration of media ownership. There are too few corporations controlling what we see, hear, and read. You are the designated stewards of the public commons known as the airwaves, and you've been giving away the public's property. Move no further with these rules, THEN move toward greater diversity of ownership, expand the voices available the public's airwaves, demand a social responsibility contract with all broadcasters, expand public and civic access. Further limit cross ownership of broadcast and newspaper outlets. Stop the erosion of the public interest and deny the ability of these ever fewer corporate media behemoths to concentrate their power further.
